Our Happy Days

CLASS HISTORY

In September of 1943 there were thirty-six boys and girls from Rosman, Balsam Grove, Silversteen, Quebec, and Toxaway who entered the eighth grade of Rosman High School. Ours was the second class to have before it the task of completing twelve grades in order to graduate—this prospect we didn't like so well. However, that failed to prevent our having a good time once we became accustomed to high school ways.

Basketball was the main event of our sophomore year since several of the best players were members of our class—this is still true.

In the tenth grade our class showed a decrease in number. Some of the boys went into service and the girls got bit by the "marriage bug". Our girls were in charge of preparing and serving the food for the Junior-Senior Reception.

Then, as Juniors, we had the great fun of decorating the lunch room for the reception. Our class play, "You Can't Always Sometimes Tell", was successfully given on December 13, 1946. During this school term, we secured a movie projector which has proven to be an enjoyable and educational addition for all students.

Most of our senior year was filled with regular classes and the experience of preparing the first annual of the school. Also, on April 15, 1948, we enjoyed giving the senior play, "Grandad Steps Out".

So we started in the eighth grade with thirty-six class members and have only sixteen in our graduating class; of this number, Braxton White and Brandon Summey entered our group after some time in service. James Hinkle joined our group from the D. A. R. school at Tomassee, S. C. From the original group Herschel Fisher, Elvin Morgan, and Billy Jones entered service, while Alvin Galloway and Willie Aiken stopped school to accept employment. One of our boys, Kenneth Whitlock, was industrious enough to finish high school in summer sessions and is continuing his education. Our class members who have been transferred to other schools are Norma King, Eugene King, Charles McCall, and Dorothy Whitmire. Embarked on the sea of matrimony are the following girls—Delma Phillips, Victoria Gillespie, Opalee Masters, Helen Jones, Vivian Morgan, Faye Johnson, Bonita McKinney, Leona Brewer, Pairlee Conner, Irene Lowe.

Thus ends our high school career of the class of '48.

Class Poem

We, the class of '48,
Of all the classes to graduate,
Now embarked upon our fate,
Shall achieve our aims at rapid rate.

Though first in school, but least in mind,
Our class was never left behind,
And all the aspirins teachers could find,
Were used to cure headaches we caused all the time.

Our grades were like the mountain tops;
Some did rise and some did drop.
The teachers thought the mountains low
As grades in all our classes show.

But to the top we shall climb
With all our school days left behind,
And in the future, as life unfolds,
We shall strive to reach our goals.

Class Song

Tune: "The Bells of St. Mary's"

In the halls of ole Rosman, we've been there for years.
They were years filled with joys and plenty of tears.
In classes, the teachers did try very hard
To teach us our duties with love in their hearts.

Chorus:

The hearts of the seniors are throbbing and pining,
Their voices are breaking for graduation's here.
And so our dear classmates, from you we are parting,
And to our dear ole Rosman Hi, we'll say "Goodbye".

The halls of ole Rosman are silent once more,
The seniors of Rosman are embarked on their fate,
And out in the world, their places they'll fill,
With loyalty, courage, and greatest of skill.

CLASS WILL

We, the beautiful and brilliant members of the Senior Class of Rosman High School, being of sound mind and body on this day, May 28, 1948, do hereby will and bequest the following material possessions and abilities to our noteworthy successors, the Juniors, who will try to replace us.

To June Sisk, who is definitely in need of the quality, Josephine Moore leaves her dignity.

Braxton White leaves his hard-earned knowledge to Hubert Callahan. However, we feel that Hubert could make the grade just as well without it.

Louise Summey bequests her ability to talk and never get tired and her weight to the lean Mary Crunkleton. Mary seems to have already developed the first talent.

Brandon Summey's skill with the baseball bat and his heart is left with Sarah Hudson. He gives this advice, "Don't use the bat on my heart."

Charles Moss feels that he can trust none other than Nell McKinney with his skill of writing geometry problems in his hands.

Mildred Greene leaves her flashing smile and winning ways to Exie Vee Wilde.

Joe Owen's place as editor-in-chief of the annual is willed to Robert Orr. We do hope Robert won't let you down—Joe found it necessary to work both night and day.

Juda Owen's public speaking ability is left to Augusta Galloway. We wonder if Augusta will need it since most of her talking tends to be private conversation with Luther.

Harold O'Shield bequests his bashfulness and knack of making teachers miserable to Favis Lowery. We hope Favis develops the former since he's well endowed with the latter now.

Jean Owen's ability to pronounce French goes to Cloe Garren who seems to have some difficulty in getting the words spoken.

James Hinkle leaves his method of deceiving the teachers to Darius Kilpatrick. He knows Darius will need to deceive them if he makes it through '48-'49.

That sense of humor embodied in J. T. McCall is to be received by Ray Fisher. May Ray develop this trait to seeing the point of humor when the joke is on himself as well as on other people.

Tracy Rice's basketball ability becomes Bill Owen's, who with some practice will soon be Rosman's basketball star.

Patsy Woodard leaves her quietness to Ila Stophel, who as rumors go, is causing the teachers a great deal of trouble.

Luther Fisher and Hugh Gillespie are the recipients of Thomas Owen's ability to keep the faculty and students well informed of all happenings. He feels sure it will take both boys to do the job which was so hard for him.

Signed and sealed on this day, May 28, 1948, before Jolie Blonde, class lawyer.

Witnesses:

1. The absent-mindedness of faculty members,
2. Rosman High pests, alias students.
3. The educational building wherein we served a term of four years.

CLASS PROPHECY

Ho-hum. My! What a dream! But sometimes dreams do come true, and maybe—say ten years from now—that's what will have happened to my dream of the Senior Class of '48.

The first person to appear in my dream was Josephine Moore. I could hardly believe my eyes, but there she was posing for a well-known fashion magazine as a famous sweater model.

Next a whistle sounded and the ball game was over. Jo-Vhenell Galloway came out on the gym floor to congratulate her ever-winning team, whose success was greatly aided by her excellent coaching.

"All Aboard! All Aboard! for deck scrubbing," comes the call from a ship. Appearing on the deck with his mop was Braxton White a member of the class of '48. I knew "Brack" was willing to start at the bottom, but I didn't know he was willing to stay there.

"All right, children, let's sing a new tune," is what I heard as I wandered through the halls of an elementary school. The singing was led by such a charming voice that I stopped to listen and realized that Juda Owen, an honor student of '48, was the director.

Then a fellow about thirty years old appeared in my dream. He was holding his small son's hand as he strolled down the sidewalk. I heard him telling the boy how he practically "ran" Rosman High School after he came home from the Navy. This description could fit none other than Brandon Summey.

Honk! Honk! Honk! Sounded a car horn as someone drove in front of a gas station. Under the wheel was Harold O'Shield and beside him was his new bride. No, Harold hadn't changed a bit—his wife was paying the bill.

"Junior, come here," is what I heard as I passed the Morgan home in Central, South Carolina. Why it was Louise Summey calling Ross, Jr., to lunch from his playing in the back yard.

Next, I went into one of the town's biggest offices to visit a friend of mine, the boss' secretary. To my surprise she was sitting on his knee and giggling about something he had said. Well, who would have believed that of Jean Owen, when back in '48 she could hardly type F, D, S, A,—?

Immediately following this event, I returned to my car, tuned in on a radio program to hear this statement—"This is station JVG bringing you a message from the new governor of North Carolina." After listening a few minutes to some jokes told by the speaker, I concluded the governor to be J. T. McCall who had told those same jokes in high school several years before he became a politician.

As I drove past the village church, I heard the familiar strains of "Here Comes the Bride." Out of curiosity, I parked the car at the curb to wait for the group to leave the church. At the doorway appeared a handsome groom with his lovely bride, Patsy Woodard.

Passing the airport, I noticed there was quite a commotion on the field. A plane was trying to land. Off came a wing, a wheel, and then the propeller. Was the pilot killed? No. Now wouldn't you know that Tracy Rice would make that sort of landing and still miraculously escape injury?

Then the pilot helped a passenger from the plane. He was quickly surrounded by an enormous crowd of "bobby-soxers" but I recognized him as Charles Moss (Shorty) who had become Van Johnson's successor.

My next stop was at the railway station. To my surprise there was Thomas Owen working as a telegraph dispatcher.

Later, I attended the show scheduled at the city auditorium. The advertising poster stated that "Singin' Joe" Owen was making his first personal appearance in that city to pick his guitar and to sing, among other favorites, that expressive melody, "Good Old Mountain Dew".

At the end of this program, persons began to arrange and decorate the auditorium. There was to be graduation exercises for a class of electrical engineers. The main address was to be delivered by James Hinkle, whose scholastic marks were the highest of the class.

Just before I waked from my dream, I discovered a small cottage nestled in the pines. There were four little boys playing outside. When their mother came to the door I instantly recognized her as Mildred Greene, who used to dream of a home, little boys, and most of all—Roy, as her husband.

The alarm sounded—another school day began.
